

Enhance your life insurance plan with our innovative LifeAssistsm supplemental income option

The need for employees to have quality life insurance benefits is undeniable. Employees want to know that his or her family will be able to meet financial obligations and basic living expenses. But what about additional costs that occur when an employee suddenly suffers a severe or catastrophic disability? Guardian’s LifeAssistsm benefit provides employees with extra financial protection they may need during this difficult life situation.

How does the LifeAssist benefit work?

LifeAssist provides employees with extra income equal to 1% of their Basic Life coverage amount and/or 1% of their Voluntary Life coverage amount to a maximum of $2,000. Benefits are paid monthly up to 100 months – or to when he or she reaches age 65 or no longer meets the disability definition (whichever happens first). Better yet, LifeAssist will not reduce any life insurance face value amounts – and if the group has Guardian Long Term Disability (LTD), LifeAssist benefits will not be deducted from LTD benefits either.

How does an employee qualify for the LifeAssist Benefit?

- Employee must be under age 60 when he or she becomes disabled, meet all eligibility requirements, and for Voluntary Life be insured on the plan for 12 months.
- Employee must be approved for Life Waiver of Premium.
- Employee must be severely or catastrophically disabled, which means he or she cannot perform at least two of the following activities of daily living: bathing, dressing, toileting, transferring, continence and eating, or is cognitively impaired.
